

Gina the Giraffe

Gina the giraffe was a happy go lucky giraffe, she enjoyed playing, even though her friends didn't always want to play with her and wouldn't always let her join in with games. Gina enjoyed school, when at school she enjoyed learning, at break she struggled to eat her lunch, the dinner giraffes made her eat before she could play which was difficult for her. At home for breakfast, she could only manage one leaf maybe two and the same for dinner. After a while Gina's parents Gerald and Greta got worried so took her to the vet. When there they said she had an eating disorder and admitted her to the vets for treatment. They tried to make her eat any way they could, and they even moved her to a special vet hospital, but Gina went blind. It was her dad that noticed so they took her back to the vets. They did tests and found she had a brain tumour but because it had been a long wait Gina didn't act like the other giraffes any more. She was partially sighted, got angry at people she got sad and scared. But despite all this she was able to get on and live an almost normal life, she got a job at McGirafalds and started making her own clothes and even became a mum. She never let her brain injury get her down.

So, the moral of this story is no matter what happens to you don't let it get you down and remember it could be worse.
